

Felix Gonzalez-Torres

Specific Objects without Specific Form

Nach einem Konzept von Tino Sehgal wird die Ausstellung täglich neu eingerichtet.

Das MMK Museum für Moderne Kunst Frankfurt am Main zeigt nach dem WIELS Contemporary Art Centre in Brüssel und der Fondation Beyeler in Basel als dritte Station die große Retrospektive Felix Gonzalez-Torres. Specific Objects without Specific Form. Die Präsentation legt die große Bandbreite der kurzen, aber international sehr wirkungsmächtigen Arbeit des auf Kuba geborenen US-amerikanischen Künstlers dar. In engem Dialog mit der Architektur des MMK zeigt die Ausstellung in Frankfurt sowohl seltene als auch bekannte Installationen, Skulpturen, Fotografien und darüber hinaus Projekte im öffentlichen Raum.

Gonzalez-Torres (1957–1996) ließ sich 1979 in New York nieder, wo er Kunst studierte und später bis zu seinem Tod im Alter von 38 Jahren als Künstler arbeitete. In den 1980er Jahren schloss sich Gonzalez-Torres dem Künstlerkollektiv Group Material an. Sein starkes Engagement für politische und gesellschaftliche Themen seiner Zeit spiegelt sich auch in seinem kritischen Verhältnis zu den damaligen Entwicklungen in der Konzeptkunst und dem Minimalismus wider. In einem breiten Spektrum an Medien verbinden sich in dem Werk von Gonzalez-Torres politische Kritik, emotionale Wirkung und sein grundsätzliches Interesse an Formen. Heute gilt sein einflussreiches Œuvre als wegweisend für nachfolgende Künstlergenerationen. Als Ausgangspunkt dienten ihm oft Objekte des täglichen Lebens, wie Uhren, Spiegel oder Lampen. Zu seinen bekanntesten Kunstwerken gehören große Mengen aufgehäufter Bonbons und Papierstapel, an denen die Besucher sich bedienen dürfen. Mit diesen minimalistischen Werken wie auch mit seinen Girlanden aus Glühlampen oder seinen tickenden Uhrenpaaren, die unweigerlich aus dem Gleichschritt geraten, erforschte Gonzalez-Torres die Zusammenhänge zwischen der Zeit, der Kunst und der menschlichen Existenz. Doch so markant bestimmte Objekte für das Werk von Gonazlez-Torres sind, lassen sie sich doch nicht auf eine bestimmte Gestalt festlegen. Wie der Titel Specific Objects without Specific Form andeutet, können diese in jeder Ausstellung eine andere Gestalt annehmen und eine neue Präsentationsform haben.

Bei jeder der drei Ausstellungsstationen in Brüssel, Basel und dem Museum für Moderne Kunst in Frankfurt wird die Schau ab der Hälfte der Laufzeit von einem Künstler umgestaltet. Im MMK wird Tino Sehgal (Künstler der Sammlung), dessen eigener künstlerischer Ansatz eine Affinität zum Werk von Felix Gonzalez-Torres aufweist, die Ausstellung ab dem 18. März neu einrichten. Ergänzt durch eine neue Werkauswahl wird sich die Präsentationsform der einzelnen Arbeiten täglich verändern, indem Tino Sehgal für die Räume des Museums eine Art von Choreographie der Werke entwickelt.

The exhibition is rearranged daily following a concept by Tino Sehgal.

Frankfurt's MMK Museum für Moderne Kunst Frankfurt am Main hosts the final leg of the traveling retrospective, Felix Gonzalez-Torres. Specific Objects without Specific Form, previously shown at WIELS Contemporary Art Centre in Brussels and the Fondation Beyeler in Basel. Including both rarely seen and more known paintings, sculptures, photographic works, and public projects, this major exhibition reflects the full scope of Gonzalez-Torres's short but prolific career.

Born in Cuba, Gonzalez-Torres (1957–1996) settled in New York in the late 1970s, where he studied art and began his practice as an artist before his untimely death of AIDS related complications in 1996, at the age of thirty-eight. He participated in the art collective Group Material in the 1980s, was an engaged social activist, and in a relatively short time developed a profoundly influential body of work that can be seen in critical relationship to Conceptual Art and Minimalism, mixing political critique, emotional affect, and deep formal concerns in a wide range of media, including drawings, sculpture, and public billboards, often using ordinary objects as a starting point—clocks, mirrors, or light fixtures. Amongst his most famous artworks are his piles of candy and paper stacks from which viewers are allowed to take away a piece. Those artworks are premised, like so much of what he did, on instability and potential for change. The result is his profoundly human body of work, intimate and fragile even as it destabilizes so many seemingly unshakable certainties (the artwork as fixed, the author as the ultimate form-giver, the exhibition as a place to look but not touch). This exhibition proposes an experimental form that is indebted to Gonzalez-Torres's own radical conception of the artwork.

At each of the stages of the exhibition tour, namely at WIELS, the Fondation Beyeler and, now, at the MMK in Frankfurt, the show is initially installed by the exhibition's curator Elena Filipovic and, halfway through its duration, is completely reinstalled by a different selected artist whose own practice has been influenced by Gonzalez-Torres. At the MMK, Tino Sehgal will reinstall the exhibition as of March 18. Sehgal, no stranger to the MMK, with a work in the collection, will in this case interpret and curate the œuvre of another artist whose approach has been important to his own. As a result, Sehgal will, for his contribution to the exhibition, not only reinstall the exhibition with a partially new checklist, but will also devise a special choreography so that daily changes can be enacted to the presentation of Gonzalez-Torres's artworks. Both versions of the exhibition are installed in close dialogue with the MMK architecture and continue this traveling project's attempt to refute the notion that an exhibition has to be something immutable or that a retrospective should offer a single, authoritative narrative. The entire project's experimental curatorial concept thus attempts to respond and pay homage to the Gonzalez-Torres's own thinking and practice.

Mit dieser ungewöhnlichen Form der Präsentation widersetzt sich das Museum für Moderne Kunst der verbreiteten Vorstellung, dass eine Ausstellung etwas Fixiertes ist und eine Retrospektive den Anspruch des umfassenden, absolut gültigen Überblicks hat. In diesem Zusammenhang verweist das experimentelle, kuratorische Konzept des Gesamtprojektes auf die radikalen Konzeptionen in Felix Gonzalez-Torres' eigenem Werk.

Die Ausstellung wurde konzipiert von Elena Filipovic und dem WIELS Contemporary Art Centre (Brüssel) in Kooperation mit dem MMK Museum für Moderne Kunst Frankfurt am Main, der Fondation Beyeler (Riehen/Basel) und der Felix Gonzalez-Torres Foundation, New York.

The exhibition concept was devised by Elena Filipovic and initiated by WIELS Contemporary Art Centre, Brussels in collaboration with the Foundation Beyeler, Riehen/Basel, the MMK Museum für Moderne Kunst Frankfurt, and the Felix Gonzalez-Torres Foundation, New York.
